INFORMATION AND PRACTICAL ADVICE ON MATTERS OF INTEREST.

The Season for Transplanting Trees in Various Sections of the Country—Directions for Moving Large Trees Without Checking Their Growth.

The time of year for transplanting trees varies in different sections and under different circumstances. The season for doing this work is less important than doing it in the best manner, and if much earth goes with the roots, any time when the trees are dormant or not in a state of rapid growth, will answer, providing, of course, the soil is in condition and circumstances generally are favorable. The most trees are probably transplanted in the spring, but there are numerous advocates for fall planting.

FIG. 1—MOVING TREES.

Trees two or three inches in diameter may be moved with comparative ease and little degree of loss, but when these have gained a diameter of half a foot or more the labor and difficulty are greatly increased.

Country Gentlemen, in reply to a recent query, "How to move swamp maples of considerable size to a lawn, without checking the growth," etc., reply by giving the following illustrated directions:

There are two modes of moving large trees. Fig. 1 shows the way in which it is done, by lifting the tree from the ground in an erect position, drawing it on wheels to its place of destination, and dropping it into the hole previously made for it.

The tree is first loosened by digging, then lifted with the lever, the trunk being wound with carpet or sackcloth, and with straw, to prevent bruising by the chains which raise it to the hinder wheels of a common farm wagon, run up to the tree from behind. Chains attached to the axle then enable the horse (or horses) hitched to the whiffletree to draw it. This mode applies well to the removal of evergreens as well as to deciduous trees, the branches of which need not be disturbed on account of the erect position. In either case, the top should, however, be made lighter by cutting in the branches so as to prevent an even, natural top.

FIG. 2—MOVING LARGE TREES.

The other mode is represented by Fig. 2, and applies only to deciduous trees. The tree is first entirely loosened by digging, and the two wheels (with the tongue) are run up against it. The top is then cut off, and the trunk is drawn down to a compact shape, and the tongue of the cart placed erect against it, and both tied securely. They are then brought down horizontally, thus lifting the tree quite out of the ground, and it is then drawn to its desired place and lowered in the same way that it was lifted.

The transplanting of large trees is not generally advised, but however careful and well conducted the removal is effected, there will be a great check given. Trees six inches in diameter and twenty feet high have thrown out their roots at least twenty feet in every direction, thus occupying a circle forty feet in diameter. A very small part of this circle is exposed, and the roots must be lightened by pruning, retaining a symmetrical form, to correspond with the part with the necessary mutilation of the roots. Trees of the size mentioned should have a removed circle of roots eight or nine feet in diameter, and the soil above the roots may all be taken off down to the mass of the fibers to lessen the load.

Favorable reports come from most of the leading states concerning the apple crop, which has matured in the condition of nearly all the crops of the country, where apples are grown in commercial quantities.

The Canada crop is reported as large, although some sections have suffered from drought. The apple crop in England and Scotland is light this year, and the fruit is of poor quality. On this continent only half of an average crop is reported, and this is largely made up of early apples.

The crop of greenings, it is reported, is the largest in years. The crop of Baldwin, however, is enormous. These are the best apples for general purposes and for exporting. They are always in demand, and the quality of red apples are also plentiful, and as red apples bring the best prices in England, a great many of them are exported. Owing to the late ripening of the crop, the quantity of fruit is now being shipped to England. The shipments usually commence in the early part of August and continue until April. The largest quantities are sent over in midwinter, when the shipments run from 40,000 to 70,000 bushels.

A rough bark on trees invites borers, smooth bark repels them. Club root in cabbages is prevented by making the seed bed on new ground or ground not used for cabbage for several years.

Do not waste wood ashes. They are sufficiently valuable to pay for saving and applying to the soil. Remember that one ill tempered cow walking loose will do much harm on a farm where colts are raised.

Clean up the farm. Neglected fence corners and rubbish piles harbor insects and pests, especially ticks and bugs. The agricultural department is organizing five new experimental stations for the study of sorghum and its manipulations—three in Kansas, one in New Jersey and one in Louisiana. The appropriation for this work this year is $100,000 larger than it has ever been before.

Large buttons which are beautiful and artistic beyond description ornament director coats. Tinted pearl, cut steel and colored metal enter into their composition. Quizzes of velvet.

Costumes for the promenade show happy associations of tone and texture. Pale tints—noticably a gamut of greens—candidate for consideration together with the most brilliant tints, and our thoroughfare present a gorgeous panorama of color—Cloak, Suit and Ladies' Wear Review.

Mr. Jordan, the section boss, and his hands, while cutting the bushes from the right of way near Ocean, Kan., killed sixty-seven muskrats. Mr. Jordan shot at the sixty-eighth and cut off his tail, remarking that it was not a good day for snakes.

Mrs. M. B. Shultz, of Rondout, N. Y., while out time digging, heard her little dog, which had followed her, bark and bark pitifully. Rushing to the spot Mrs. Shultz was horrified to find a large black snake wound tightly around her dog's body. With great difficulty Mrs. Shultz killed the reptile, but the little dog remained prostrate with fear for several hours. The afternoon of the same day Mrs. Shultz killed another snake of the same variety.

Samuel Norman, one of the recent men in Washington, was once a government clerk. Another time during the war he was a clerk in the post office. He was very rich in 1862, when he got his start by organizing the post office system of Japan. He is said to have made $100,000 in an ever since his return from Japan.

FACTS ABOUT WOOL. France grows but 25 per cent. of the wool she uses. This country furnishes one-sixth of all the wool grown. There are 53,000,000 sheep in the United States. The annual clip of wool in this country is about 100,000,000 pounds. The United States is the second wool producing country in the world. Eighty per cent. of the wool used in the United States is produced here. Wool raising is the only great farming industry in the benefits of which every section shares. The annual value of the wool crop is $75,000,000 to $80,000,000, varying with the market value.

HINTS ABOUT POULTRY HOUSES.

The Importance of Ventilation Without Draughts—A Good Floor.

Of all points connected with the planning and building of poultry houses, that of ventilation receives perhaps the least consideration, though it is one of the most important, as every one is ready in a general way to acknowledge. The most usual compromise for intelligent ventilation is to make a few holes in one end of the house and let the air get in and out as best it can. But such a method is to be avoided, neither should any holes be made near the ground or anything done to create a draught upwards, as when this occurs there is great danger of the fowls having to roost midway between two openings. Ventilation must be procured without strong draughts. The plan of forming a small opening in the roof of the house and inserting ventilating traps at each end of this chamber will be found a good one.

The floor is another very important item. It ought not to be less than six inches above the ground outside, so as to prevent water running into the house, which will do it, if below or on a level. Of all the floors that may be laid down in a poultry house the following is one of the best. First, dig the ground out to a depth of twelve or fifteen inches, and then fill up half of this with broken bricks, gravel, burnt ballast, coarse stones or slag, which must be well beaten down. A compost of coal ashes, fine gravel, quicklime and water must next be made, well mixed together and spread over the other, so as to raise the floor to the required height above the ground. This, when hardened, will be a perfectly dry floor, one upon which water will not stand, and yet it will be hard and firm in its nature, as well as warm and comfortable. It is easily cleaned and is inexpensive. Of coarse earth or soil must be always thinly spread over it, as the floor should be upon every kind of floor, and renewed every day or two.

The question of size is one that must of necessity be ruled by the inclination of the owner. We mean as to whether he prefers to have one house or several scattered about. A house 12 feet long by 6 feet wide and 7 feet from the floor to the top of the roof will be large enough to accommodate fifty fowls.

The Custom of Putting Blinds on Horses Indiscriminately is a Great Error, says Col. J. C. Batten, in his treatise on the practical horsemanship. Following are in brief some of the statements made by him on the use of blinds on horses.

The custom of putting on a showy headgear and handsome blinds are a great improvement to the style and general appearance of real well set up carriage horses. But for huggers, carter boys, wagon, truck and general travel they are wholly unnecessary, and as regards safety they are a detriment rather than an advantage. We must consider that a leader should see where they are going, and the horse that shows proves that he wants to keep out of danger by the very fact of his shyng. We must consider that a leader should see where they are going, and the horse that shows proves that he wants to keep out of danger by the very fact of his shyng.

The special felicity of Thomas Wentworth Higginson has been to unite the activities of a political and social reformer with the grace and dignity of a man of letters. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1823, was graduated at Harvard in 1841 and at the divinity school in 1847, and in the same year was ordained pastor of a Congregational church in Newbury, Mass. In 1850 he was a successful Free Soil candidate for congress. In 1858 he was elected to the Massachusetts legislature.
